

Hi Carl,

I bought an I Pro Traveller some months ago and have now had some experience of using it for QRP portable. I have to say that I have been delighted with its performance. Working from the cliff tops on the Yorkshire coast and using only five Watts I made several contacts including Saudi Arabia and and Sardinia, receiving 5/9 reports on both occasions. Both were using telephony and not CW. The band in use was 15m.

What is also interesting is that the antenna also attracts considerable attention from members of the public that are not radio enthusiasts. When a particular gentleman asked what I was doing I told him I was speaking to a radio ham in Jeddah. At first said gent was very sceptical but when Samir returned and stated his QTH you could almost hear the clunk as his jaw hit the ground. A loud and clear signal from such a distant station, all courtesy of the I Pro and my FT 817.

Please keep up the good work!
